

Accessibility Statement

Last updated: 22 August 2026

She Changes is committed to making this website as accessible and usable as possible for all visitors, including people with disabilities.

The website has been reviewed using the Wix Accessibility Wizard and has been developed with accessibility considerations including:

- clear heading structures;
- alternative text for meaningful images;
- readable text and colour contrast;
- descriptive links and buttons;
- keyboard-accessible navigation where supported;
- content designed to remain usable when browser text is enlarged;
- reduced reliance on colour alone to communicate meaning.

I continue to review and improve the accessibility of the site as it develops.

Known limitations

Some third-party content, embedded services or downloadable documents may not offer the same level of accessibility as the main website.

Older content may also contain accessibility issues that have not yet been fully reviewed.

If you encounter a problem accessing any part of the website, or would like information provided in a different format, please contact me and I will do my best to help.
